Ascident to Hon. A. J. Sweeney.

Col. A. J. Sweeney is confined to his residence on North Main street with a very severe injury. Last Friday he drove with a part of his family to the State Fair, As he was driving out of the grounds after the races a nut came off the front axis and let one of the wheele off. As the carriage pitched forward Miss Sweeney was thrown out with conaderable force, but sustained no severe injury. The horse was frightened and made strong efforts to run away. Col. Sweeney held to the lines, however, and managed to drive the animal into a fence, thereby preventing him from getting away. In getting out of the carriage the Colonel was thrown against some projection that cut a bad gash in one of his legs about the knee, close to the knee cap. His physician has ordered him not to use his limb for several days.

People come to us to buy railroad tickets, to exchange money, and they bring huge packages to be expressed. I couldn't begin to recall all the peculiar breaks that have come under my personal observation. A very prevalent idea is that the Postofice is a Government money exchange, and dilapidated bills and mutilated coin are brought here daily to be redeemed. I've had bills brought to me that were torn to small pieces, and coin that was battered, pounded and simost unrecognizable, by people who either wanted statups for it or new money. Such people are usually for-eigners, who think that this being a Gov-ernment building, any business of what-ever nature, so long as it is in any way connected with the Government, can be transacted here. They are always very suspicious, and a refusal to comply with their wishes often makes them frantic; they think that they are being imposed. they think that they are being imposed

The cool and pleas ant air and the brilliant and beautifu moon in an almost cloudless sky com bined to tempt the people outdoors, er bined to tempt the people outdoors, especially the young people. This is the "harvest moon." In olden times the simple rural people of England entertained a superstition that Providence ordained that the moon should rise early and set late and shine unusually clear that they might continue into the dewy night their labors in the harvest field. Hence the name.

The moon has been rising at nearly the same hour for the last few nights, the intervals during the present period ranging from twelve minutes to half an hour, against an ordinary difference of about from twelve minutes to half an hour, against an ordinary difference of about forty minutes. The path traversed by the moon in its journey around the earth, which it completes every twenty-nine days, forms an angle with the path traversed by the earth around the sun, completed every year, and also with the earth's horizon. If a luminous line were drawn across the firmament representing the earth's orbit and another representing the earth's horizon, it would be found the earth's orbit and another representing the tearth's horizon, it would be found that the two form a smaller angle at one time in the year than they do at the other, six months sooner or six months later, as the case may be. The earth and moon are near the former or smaller angle in September each year, and near the latter angle in March, which accounts for the phenomenon of harvest moon.
